

Event Overview

Engineering Wales is back for a second year and with the recent published review by Professor Graeme Reid on government-funded research and innovation in Wales, this event will focus on the changes to the R&D landscape and the impending effects upon it in a post Brexit Wales.

As both local and national governments plan future R&D funding linked to industrial strategy, universities need to be well informed and prepared to benefit from this. Engineering Wales aims to provide a platform to highlight this change through a number of lead speakers from industry, academia as well representatives from key funding bodies.
